Hello Jane,

Thank you for the email.

Unfortunately, I don't think that we can take down the protocol. It has been registered with CrossRef, so it exists as registered document. Also: Hopefully, other people have been using it in the meantime, so it would be a mistake to remove a citable object.

It might be helpful to tell the editor that the Protocol Exchange is effectively a pre-print server. And that it is not a problem to re-use content from it.

I would imagine that the process of peer-review, editing and copyediting will also result in a manuscript that is substantially different to that published in the Protocol Exchange.

I am happy for you to pass my contact details to the editor handling your current manuscript.

All the best,

Bronwen
