Dear Edward,

Thank you for your request. Permission is granted without charge.

As an author you are entitled to re-publish in any medium you choose. I normally suggest that you advise any fellow authors of your intentions to avoid future conflict.

The acknowledgement is very important and should state "reproduced/adapted with permission" and give the source journal name - the acknowledgement should either provide full citation details or refer to the relevant citation in the article reference list - the full citation details should include authors, journal, year, volume, issue and page citation.

Where appearing online or in other electronic media, a link should be provided to the original article (e.g. via DOI).

Journal of Cell Science: <http://www.biologists.com/journal-of-cell-science>

We wish you the best of luck with your projects.

Kind regards

Richard

Subject: Rights and Permissions for Doctoral Thesis Preparation and Other Publications

To whom it may concern,

Hello, my name is Edward Germany, recently I published an article in the Journal of Cell Science (doi: 10.1242/jcs.219956). I am currently in preparation for my Doctoral thesis and would like to use data which was published in this article. I have read the "Open Access (rights and permissions)" for the authors however I was unsure what steps I needed to go through in order to use information and data published by your journal.

I am also in preparation of a protocol for publication in a method we used in this paper. I would like to use a figure we published in the supplemental information and again I was unsure if this was allowed or if I would be able to receive the rights to use this image.

Thank you for your time and any help you can give would be greatly appreciated.

Best,

Edward Germany
